Subject: Your threat letter dated May 6, 2005

Trent,

I'm sure you will be pleased to know that we are going to save your client, WGP, LLC the money and trouble of having to attempt to sue us over your silly claim of "Willful Infringement of Worr Game Products' Intellectual Property Holdings."

For the record, the markers from National Paintball Supply and Dragon Empire, which you refer to, were virtual knock-offs of the Autococker. We stand firm in our conviction that our Illusion marker does not infringe upon K2/WGP's (unspecified) intellectual rights.

Be that as it may, as of today, May 23rd, 2005, Action Markers, Inc. has officially left the paintball marketplace. Since K2/WGP has been so concerned about us selling a few Illusion markers, which at best only "resemble" their unspecified "Intellectual Property Holdings", I'm sure this will make your clients very happy. You have successfully shut down yet another small company. That's something for them to be proud of. One more notch in their 'Cocker barrel.

Sincerely,

Steve Deam

P.S. You can tell the boys at K2/Brass Eagle/WGP - Steve Dement and Steve Cherry in particular - that we immensely enjoyed our visit to California despite the bogus meeting that they requested.
